Description I have lived in Lacey for 25 years, and of course noticed the foul odors from the Ostrom Mushroom farm from our first drive down Marvin Road in 1991. I was told since this was a long standing family business in Lacey that residents couldn't do anything about it. When the RAC (regional athletic center) was being built citizens were told that the profit to Ostroms from the sale of the property came with a promise from Ostroms to clean up their air pollution.

In the last several years I, and many friends who also live in the new and established neighborhoods near the mushroom farm, have noticed much heavier odors and what looks like particulate or cloudy, smoggy air in our neighborhoods. Several of us also have pulmonary issues when this air and odor is so heavy. This poor air quality on the "heavy" days literally takes our breath away. It is a combination of chemical and waste odor.

With the new Regional Recreation facility and a school across the street one wonders what kind of chemical pollution is being inhaled by so many of our citizens. This stink also affects property values and the ability to complete real estate transactions if buyers notice the smells and polluted air.

I'd like to know what can be done to improve the air quality from this business's air pollution.

During the work week, most notable starting mid mornings and continues through day progressively worsening.
